

A-Z for Those Caring For Elderly Parents...

 Adaptations Audit Check around the home for hazards. What extra support is needed? Routine testing, fighting germs, making sure your parents can see, hear, and use their mobility aids – such as glasses, hearing aids, and walkers – are vital. They may be able to adapt to the changes, but going to the optician, hearing aid audiologist, or physiotherapist may be needed.	Some barriers stem from a reduction in normal barriers (regularly making a road even for the way you do things) they would otherwise have. Flexible with other support may need to be. Don't worry about making them feel they are different. Sometimes they may feel different!	 Diagnosis There are several types of dementia, with different, but overlapping, symptoms. It's important to get a diagnosis?
